"Celebrated Crambes"—DORSET.

Affpuddle, a small village in Last Dorset, picturesquely situated in the heart of "Hardy's country," and on the banks of the little River Trent or Piddle, from which latter it derives its name. A well-known beauty spot in the village is the scene here shown, where the interesting little church (Early English and Perpendicular) nestles in close proximity to the old mill near to the river's bank.

(For Address only.)
